Kenyon safety knife reduces workplace accidents

Preventing cut accidents is a major safety issue in all paper mills. More often than not open blades are to blame. This issue was highlighted again recently following a number of workplace incidents.

For many years William Kenyon has tried to address the problem by offering a bespoke Safety Knife for cutting and splicing ropes. This unique Safety Knife has a 9mm mouth capable of cutting up to a 13mm rope. The stainless steel blades provide a quicker, cleaner cut than most standard knives and can be both reversed quickly and easily replaced.

For further information, please contact your local agent or our sales team (see details below).

Welcome for new recruits

William Kenyon has recently recruited two extra staff at its manufacturing facility in Dukinfield in the UK.

Lee Parker joins the company in the warehouse/despatch area while Joe Cartwright has started an Apprenticeship centred primarily within production and the testing laboratory. The Apprenticeship also includes an NVQ course in manufacturing.

A warm welcome to both new members of the team.
